Ask any one in position to know intimately of these things and each and every one of them will give a like answer. Even if we had none of these opinions we have but to glance around in our own community and see what the saloons have done for the men and boys in our town. Have they done anything commendable? I have yet to hear of it. The business is despicable and should be frowned upon by our good citizens; and not only frowned upon, but voted down and out. Not by levying a high license to force a few out of business. License for crime is all wrong, whether high or low, but the whole nefarious business ought to cease.
