

AN HEIRESS LIVING ON CHARITY.

Catharine Gafney, the nurse for whom a fortune of something like $100,000 was reported in yesterday's TIMES to be waiting, has not been discovered yet by Silas M. Stillwell, her former employer. It now appears that the fortune left by her brother, P. H. Gafney, is nearer $150,000 than $100,000, but another heir in the person of an elder brother, has been discovered. The last heard of Catharine Gafney was that she had been admitted to some public charitable institution, and there Mr. Stillwell is now searching. He expects to find some trace of her to-day.

The New York Times

Published: July 28, 1888

Copyright © The New York Times