Early morning temperatures were in the 30s and 40s with readings in the upper teens and 20s in winds sheltered valleys. Highs on Wednesday at the lower elevations were mostly in the 50s and 60s with a few low 70s along the south coast. The warmest reading Wednesday was 73 at Catalina Avalon.

A series of Pacific weather systems will bring a threat of rain to much of northern and central California through Friday. High pressure just off the southern California coast will keep most of the southland dry through the weekend. The high pressure system will build into central California on Saturday pushing the threat of rain towards the Oregon border.

National summary

A winter storm moved up the Gulf Coast into the South today, dumping snow at the rate of up to an inch an hour, snarling traffic, closing schools and sending "panicked" shoppers streaming to stores for supplies.

The Southern storm was expected to combine with a storm system moving across the northern Plains to spread snow into New England later today. Warnings and advisories for snow spanned the East Coast from Georgia to Maine.

A cold Canadian air mass dubbed the "Alberta Clipper" numbed the northern Plains Wednesday with single-digit temperatures and threatened to drop wind chills as low as minus 50 degrees in the Great Lakes tonight.

Snow fell early today in Mississippi, Alabama and North Carolina, and northern Georgia was glazed with rain, sleet and snow. Centerville, Ala., and Asheville, N.C., were hit with 2 inches of snow.

In Mississippi, state police said the snow tripled traffic accidents in Simpson, Covington, Copiah and Lincoln counties as cars slid into ditches. The snow also closed schools in Simpson County today.

"Up North, they get 2 to 3 inches and it's not a big problem," said Hugh Atkins, Floyd County civil defense director in Rome, Ga. "Down here, we can have an inch and it just about paralyzes us. It comes down as snow and then turns to ice on the roads."

Dianna Vickers, manager at Kroger grocery in Atlanta said the store was crowded with shoppers stocking up on supplies Wednesday.

"It was extremely busy," she said. "People were saying they had to stock up. People panicked."

In North Carolina, snow fell at the rate of an inch per hour early today at the Triad Regional Airport, and several areas reported 3 or more inches of snow. Up to 8 inches was forecast for the North Carolina mountains, and up to 10 inches was predicted for parts of West Virginia.

MARKET

Stocks higher in active trading

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market headed higher at midday Thursday in active trading as buying momentum continued to outweigh profit taking.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 10.40 Wednesday to end a record winning streak, was up 9.84 to 2103.91 at noon EST.

The New York Stock Exchange index was up 0.64 to 153.54. The price of an average share was up 17 cents. Gainers led losers 815-634 among the 1,881 issues crossing the NYSE tape.

Big Board volume amounted to about 84,250,000 shares at noon, compared with 98,600,000 in the same period Wednesday.

"This is the kind of market that just doesn't want to give up," said Hildegard Zagorski of Prudential-Bache Securities. "When there is a pullback, people are right there to get back in."

Analysts said the market got a psychological boost from news that West Germany's central bank, Deutsche Bundesbank, Thursday cut its discount rate by 0.5 percent to 3 percent, effective Jan. 23.

Futures-related buying also aided the market early, traders said. Stock index futures prices traded at a premium to their underlying cash indexes, prompting arbitrageurs to sell the futures and buy stocks.

"Traders are physically tired from the relentless activity on Wall Street since the beginning of the year," said Jon Groveman, head of equity trading at Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. "Wall Street's mood is conflicted," he added. "It is too soon to sell, but on a trading basis it may be a little bit late to buy."

The stock market closed lower for the first time in 1987 Wednesday, as widespread profit taking ended a 13-session winning streak for the Dow.

On the trading floor, Cincinnati Gas & Electric was the most active NYSE-listed issue, up 1/4 to 28 3/4.

Pepsico followed, rising 1/4 to 31 1/4. Walt Disney was third, rising 1 1/4 to 54 3/4.

Bank of America was up 1/4 to 15 1/4. It reported fourth-quarter profits of $82 million compared with a loss of $178 million in the year-ago quarter.

Former deputy DA wins big settlement

By PETER PAGE
Journal Staff Writer

Former district attorney Vivian Rackauckas' firing of former deputy district attorney Mary-Margaret O'Connell in October 1984 has been ordered rectified with a legal settlement amounting to $45,280, in addition to rehiring her.

The actual cost to the county of the O'Connell firing is $96,853. Besides the settlement filed Wednesday, the county paid $51,573 to be represented in the case by the law firm of Crosby, Heafey, Roach and May.

Judge William Ferroggiaro, a visiting jurist from Humboldt County, termed O'Connell's dismissal "unlawful." The judge, writing in a final judgment filed Wednesday, said Rackauckas fired O'Connell in "retaliation" after she took her salary grievance to the Mendocino County Employees Association.

O'Connell was told, after coming to work in July 1984, that she would be paid an entry level salary, despite being promised a hirer pay rate.

The settlement ordered by Ferroggiaro calls for the county to pay $18,952 to Pano Stephens, the attorney who successfully represented O'Connell, $14,000 in lost wages and benefits to O'Connell, another $10,065 in expenses she incurred as a result of the dismissal, and court costs amounting to $2,263.

The county has also been ordered to pay O'Connell $200 per month, which is the difference between what she now earns as a Monterey County deputy district attorney and what her salary would be here.

"There is no question my termination was malicious," O'Connell said, when contacted this morning. "The time is past when county counsels can stick their heads in the sand and say attorneys on the county staff have no due process rights."

O'Connell said she is "interested but undecided" on returning to work here. She has so far not discussed her possible rehiring with Susan Massini, who took office Jan. 5.

Massini said this morning that an opening exists for a deputy prosecutor, and she would happily rehire O'Connell.

"I am anxious to hear from her," Massini said. "I would like to have her back. She is an excellent attorney, hard working, and admired by everyone in the system."

White house signals veto

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House sent a veto signal to Capitol Hill today, directed at a $20 billion clean-water bill passed by crushing majorities in the House and Senate and identical to one President Reagan killed last year.

"The president's advisers will almost surely recommend veto," White House spokesman Larry Speakes told reporters.

Caroline E., wife of Ira Bidwell, was the next person buried in the family plot. She died May 28, 1891 at the age of 51. Her marker says she was a native of Missouri. Her headstone was broken off its base, probably by vandals. It rests against the base.

Two unmarked graves were noted on documents at the Held-Poage Library. One of the graves had been marked with a small cardboard marker, but the cardboard is now gone. The other spot appeared to be a grave, but no tombstone or marker was around, according to the documents.

There are two family members who died during this time period, according to county records. One was John W., 35, who died Nov. 13, 1889. The other was 13-year-old Fannie who died Oct. 27, 1900.

Thomas Benton Howard is the only other son shown to be buried with his parents, who reportedly had 12 children. He was born March 20, 1852 and died Aug. 29, 1918, according to the obelisk that marks his grave. The other three sides of his stone were not used to mark his family's burial places. The final graves are designated with one marker. Those are for Mark, born March 1, 1818 and died Sept. 24, 1900, his wife Rachel Marcum Howard, born May 30, 1814 and died April 3, 1902, and their daughter Lucy, born Sept. 8, 1843 and died Jan. 30, 1917.

Smith remembers his aunt Lucy as being "kind of skinny," he says. She never married, but stayed on the homestead. "She was the cook of the outfit," he adds.

Lucy was loved. When the graveyard was researched by the Mendocino County Historical Society, there was an inscription at the foot of her grave. The words are Mark Twain's, with Lucy's name inserted. It is gone now, stolen. Lorene Bogner noticed that the piece of marble containing the inscription was missing about two years ago. It read:

"Cool southern wind blow gently here
Warm southern sun shine brightly here;

Soft stars of night shine bright,
Goodnight, dear Lucy, Goodnight, Goodnight.

Four are chosen

Ukiah band members named to No. Calif. Honor Band

Four outstanding Ukiah instrumental musicians have been selected to play in a Northern California High School Honor Band concert at Cal State University, Chico, Feb. 6-7.

Ukiah's Wendy Stancer, clarinet; Clayton Young, baritone horn; Alden Perry, tuba, and Shanene Graham, baritone saxophone, are the students of Band Director Rowland Nielson selected to attend the two-days of rehearsals and performances at Chico State.

Dr. David Whitwell, of Cal State Northridge, will be guest-conductor for the Nor Cal Honor

Band. More than 40 high schools submitted tapes of their outstanding instrumentalists for possible selection of those students for the 100-piece NC Honor Band.

Live auditions for first-chair or section-leading appointments will be held in Chico, followed by two days of intensive rehearsals.

The concert will be held in Harlan Adams Theater, Chico State University, at 8:15 p.m. on Feb. 7.

This is the Silver Anniversary for the Northern California High School Honor Band event, sponsored by the Northern California Band Directors' Association.

P.V. retains Centerville

Potter Valley schools trustees voted to retain the former Centerville High School building rather than sell it as surplus property during the Wednesday school board meeting.

A study session will be held Feb. 4 to take suggestions for its use, with a final decision coming at the board meeting on Feb. 18.

In other action, the board offered classified and confidential management employees a $300 bonus, pro-rated on hours worked based on full time schedules, in lieu of a salary increase. They offered elementary school principal Kay Schultz a raise in salary from $33,500 to $36,500.

Expenditures from lottery funds will be restricted until exact amounts derived from the state are received. The funds have been earmarked for items such as library books, musical instruments, computer software, landscaping and repair of students' lockers.
