FCR A NINE-HOUR DAY.

Printers Will Begin Their Aggressive Work To-morrow.

sive Work To-morrow.

To-morrow it is expected will be marked by a crisis in the strike of the printers. The men decided to wait a week before making any aggressive moves, and the majority of the employers were of the opinion that at the end of that time the men would willingly come back to the jobs they left behind them. The first distribution of strike funds will be made to-morrow, and it is expected that this will greatly encourage the men. The union already has a good supply of money and within another week funds from the International will arrive. Assistance has also been promised by every other union to the effect of the process. International will arrive. Assistance has also been promised by every other union in the city, but the officers of the union to not think it will be necessary to call for outside aid. It was reported yesterday that many of the employers had made overtures to treat with the men as individuals, or as chapels, and the proprietors report that men have been making overtures to them. Both of these statements are contradicted by the opposite side, and while each claims advantages, the situation appears practically unchanged. A special meeting of the union will be held this afternoon to discuss the situation and decide upon the amount of strike funds to be distributed.

A meeting of the Brewery Workmen's Union was held last night, and that body tendered its heartlest sympathy and unqualified support to the striking printers. The brewers are making preparations for their annual picnic which will be held in Harbor View Park on the 17th. John Monohan, a pressman in the employ of Hicks-Judd, applied to the police last evening for permission to carry a revolver. He claimed that he needed protection against injury at the hands of striking printers and pressmen. The permit was granted.

INSPECTION OF HIGH SCHOOLS

Professor Brown Commends California's System.

Is Efficient Although Nowhere Recognized in the School

Declares, However, That the Plan Is a Very Expensive One.

Professor Elmer E. Brown, in a lecture to a teachers' class at the State University yesterday, gave an interesting exposition of the tendency on the part of various States to establish a unified system of education. He said in part:

"The development of secondary educa-tion under the control of the State has been attended with many difficulties. We have seen, on the other hand, running through our educational history, a growing demand for a complete and unified educational system. By this unification I do not understand the subordinating of the lower schools to the universities and making them merely preparatory to the universities. It is a unification which aims at rendering complete every intrinsic part of the system.

"We have seen that many high schools have been established by municipalities and by local districts. Though not provided for by State laws, these schools have been sustained by the courts. Yet such schools, excellent though many of them are, do not constitute a complete State system of secondary education. Such a system can only be attained by statutory provision for the establishment

State system of secondary education.
Such a system can only be attained by statutory, provision for the establishment of secondary schools, financial support of them, determination of the course of study, licensing and appointment of teachers and the inspection of the schools, all by the central authority.

"These conditions are as yet but partially realized. Our statutes have made extensive provision for local control, but they exhibit a strong tendency toward a centralized State system. This growing tendency is exhibited most strongly at present in the States of Maine, Massachusetts, New York, Indiana, Minnesota, North Dakota, California and Maryland. "In Minnesota since the year 1881 there has been a noticeable development toward a centralized system. In that year the Governor of the State, the Superintendent of Public Instruction and the president of the University of Minnesota were constituted a State High School Board. An act of the State Legislature provided for pecuniary aid to any preparatory school offering free tuition to pupils of both sexes from any part of the State. Two conditions were imposed—that courses should be given sufficient to prepare the students for the University of Minnesota, and that inspection of the schools by State authorities should be permitted.

"One of the glories of our California system is that provision is made for expert supervision of the high schools. Ours is, I believe, the most thorough system of inspection to be found in any State, even those that have the accrediting system. "The system of visitation of high schools by university professors is a very expensive system, and, strange to say, it is entirely unprovided for by law. The arrangement is a purely voluntary one between the university and the high schools and not a word can be found relating to fit in the school law of California from beginning to end.

"At present the various high schools of this State are largely supported by local funds. The State furnishes, approximately, 45 per cent of the financial aid fo

Miss Nolan of the Fairmount School Dies From Gas Poisoning.

While preparing to curl her hair yester-day afternoon, Miss Celia Nolan was asphyxiated by gas in her room at the home of her sister, Mrs. Walter Tillman, at 2939 Folsom street yesterday. Mrs. Tillman left her sister playing the piano early in the afternoon and went out on business. She returned about 4 o'clock and found the house full of gas, and on investigating the cause discovered Miss investigating the cause discovered Miss Nolan lying on the floor of her room, with her curling-tongs by her side and one gas jet open. Dr. Charles A. Clinton, whose wife was a sister of Miss Nolan, was called, and arrived half an hour later, but the young lady was dead.

Miss Nolan was a teacher in the Fairmount School for a number of years, and retained the position up to the time of her death, but within the last year has not been able to attend to her duties regularly on account of ill-health. For the last few months she had been suffering from nervous prostration, and had been granted a vacation. Recently she had recovered to a certain extent, and told friends that she intended to resume her work in the school on Monday.

Miss Nolan was 27 years of age, and besides her two sisters leaves an aged father and mother, of whom the latter will hardly survive the shock of her daughter's death.
